Stanley Museum of Art Exterior Signage

A proposal for additional temporary exterior signage on the south-facing wall at the Stanley Museum of Art was presented.

The museum proposes using more of the wall to display highlighted collections and events, beyond initial designs and use to date for primary exhibits. The signage would be mounted on the concrete wall via a mounting mechanism as at Kinnick Stadium.

Discussion included process and responsibility for review of each temporary sign; the precedent being set by installing an additional building monument sign used for branding; not placing signage beyond the translucent band currently part of the wall.

Committee members unanimously supported this proposal with review of each individual display by the administration through existing processes. Administration and committee are willing to revisit process and decision following implementation.
